CREW'S RESTAURANT

Website Project Documentation

1. Project overview

Crew's Restaurant is a single-page restaurant and cafe website. It presents the restaurant's menu, chef profiles, dining ambience, guest reviews, opening hours, contact details, and a table reservation form. The HTML document title is “Restaurant and Cafe Website.”

The website is designed to let visitors explore the restaurant before visiting. A navigation bar links to sections within the same page. Its visual style uses a warm beige background, deep burgundy sections, and gold accents to create an elegant restaurant theme.

2. Features and interactions

- Navigation bar: Links to Menu, Chefs, Ambience, Reviews, Timings, Contact, and Reserve. Each link uses an in-page anchor to jump to its corresponding section.
- Hero section: Displays a welcome heading and restaurant slogan, alongside a local image referenced as Sanji.png.
- Menu: Organizes dishes into Starters, Main Dishes, and Sweets and Drinks. Each menu item shows a name, short description, and price in rupees.
- Menu-card hover effect: Menu items move upward and gain a shadow when hovered, using CSS transform and transition properties.
- Chef profiles: Shows three chef cards with images and role/name labels: Pastry Chef, Head Chef, and Sous Chef.
- Ambience gallery: Displays three venue images labeled The Main Hall, The Cafe Corner, and The Garden Terrace.
- Guest reviews: Shows three review cards with star ratings, comments, and guest names.
- Opening hours: Lists the restaurant's schedule from Tuesday through Sunday and indicates that Monday is closed.
- Contact section: Displays a phone number, email address, street address in Ginza, Tokyo, and a map image referenced as map.png.
- Reservation form: Provides fields for name, email, phone number, number of guests, date, time, and allergies or special occasions. The name, phone, date, and time fields are marked required; the phone field uses a 10-digit pattern.
- Form focus and button hover: Input fields change border color when focused. The submit button changes color, gains a shadow, and moves slightly upward on hover.
- Footer: Displays a copyright line, owner name, restaurant name, and class/group label.

3. How it was developed

- HTML structure: The website is contained in one HTML document. The head includes the page title and an internal CSS style block; the body contains the navigation, hero, menu, chef gallery, ambience, reviews, timings, contact details, reservation form, and footer.
- Semantic and layout elements: The source uses elements including nav, ul, li, a, div, section, h1–h4, p, img, address, form, label, input, select, option, textarea, button, and footer.
- In-page navigation: IDs such as menu, chefs, ambience, reviews, timings, contact, and reserve are assigned to sections. Navigation links use matching fragment references, so the browser scrolls to the selected section.
- CSS visual theme: The stylesheet sets a global margin and padding reset, beige page background, burgundy navigation and cards, gold accents, typography, spacing, borders, rounded corners, and shadows.
- Flexbox layout: display:flex is used for the navigation, hero, menu groups, chef gallery, ambience gallery, reviews, and contact layout. flex-wrap is used for menu groups so cards can wrap onto additional rows.

- Reusable classes: Classes such as .heading, .set, .menu-card, .item, .img-set, .img-card, .ambi, .rev-set, .rev-card, .time-set, .con-set, .cont, .res-form, and .form-set organize and style repeated content.
- CSS interactions: Hover selectors and transition properties animate menu cards, chef cards, contact/map elements, navigation links, and the reservation button. Focus selectors visually highlight form controls.
- Assets and external images: The hero and map images use local relative paths Sanji.png and map.png. Chef and ambience images are loaded from external URLs, which depend on internet access and the remote hosts.

The submitted source uses HTML and CSS only. It contains no JavaScript, server-side application, database, or reservation-management integration.

4. Current limitations and accurate behavior

- Reservation form is not connected to a booking system: The form has no action URL, backend endpoint, or JavaScript submit handler. The browser can apply built-in validation to required fields and the 10-digit phone pattern, but the HTML does not store a booking, send it to the restaurant, or confirm a reservation.
- Email field is not required: The email input is type=email, but it does not have the required attribute. The browser may validate its format when a value is entered, but visitors can leave it blank.
- Guest count is a fixed selection: The guest selector offers preset options from 1 through 6 and “7 or more.” It does not check real table capacity or availability.
- No live date/time availability: The date and time inputs collect visitor selections in the browser. The page does not compare them with a live schedule or existing reservations.
- No online ordering or payment: Menu prices are displayed for information. There is no cart, checkout, order submission, or payment feature.
- Local image dependencies: Sanji.png and map.png must exist at the relative paths referenced by the HTML. If either file is missing or moved, the corresponding image will not display.
- External image dependencies: Chef and ambience images load from third-party image URLs. They may fail if the visitor is offline, the host blocks access, or a URL changes.
- Responsive layout needs testing: The CSS uses Flexbox, but no media queries are present. Fixed widths and large hero text may require additional small-screen styling for phones and tablets.
- Static content and reviews: Menu items, prices, chef names, reviews, contact details, and opening hours are hard-coded in the HTML. There is no database or admin panel to update them dynamically. The displayed reviews are static page content, not live customer submissions.
- Form markup detail: The email label points to id=email, while the email input in the supplied HTML has id=Name. This mismatch should be corrected so the label is properly associated with the email field.

Possible future improvements

A future version could connect the reservation form to a backend or booking service, validate availability, send confirmation emails, and store reservation records. It could also add online ordering and payment, a content-management interface, and responsive CSS breakpoints. The email label/input ID mismatch and the local image paths should also be checked. These are recommendations, not capabilities included in the supplied HTML.

Prepared from the uploaded Restaurant.html source. This document contains only the four requested sections.
